CLASSIC. REDEFINED

45' (GER, ENG subs)

Their concept is not just a concert, it's an experience.

Berlin: the shining metropolis of classical music with several world-class orchestras, three opera houses and iconic concert halls, but Berlin is also the habitat in which classical music secures its survival and future. The city attracts classical artists like no other cultural metropolis in the world who are inspired by the idea that the classical concert needs new performance concepts and formats if it is to survive in the long term. Artists who put all the parameters of the classical world to the test and redefine: what alternative concert venues are there? How do contemporary modern programs sound? The film shows how lively, dust-free and imaginative young musicians convey their music. Their concerts are sold out and the audience is thrilled.
